Golf and Wine in the Cowichan Valley

Arbutus Ridge Golf Course

No, it's not likely the pig-tailed prom queen on the golf course beverage cart is going to be ditching her ice-chilled stock of beer for Australian Syrahs and Oregon Pinot Noirs any time soon. After all, golf and beer go together like cake and ice cream. But, thanks to wine regions like Napa,

Niagara - and one you've rarely, if ever, heard about, Vancouver Island's Cowichan Valley - golf and wine are getting paired together more and more often. And, if you're like me, the palate can definitely make room for the combination.

With Victoria sprawling likes it's never sprawled before, the Cowichan Valley, located a short 45-minute drive "up island" over the Malahat, is having an awakening, of sorts. People are coming. People are buying property. People are finding out about the wines. And people are discovering that the fairways and greens here are some of the finest on the island.
